

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method and device for coding video where a video signal is spatially decomposed into at least two signals of different frequency sub-bands, an individualized motion compensated temporal filtering scheme is applied to each sub-band signal adaptively according to signal contents, and texture coding is applied to each of the motion compensated temporally filtered subband signals adaptively according to the signal content.